Thank you for your interest in the Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) program. There are many children who need an advocate and we are hopeful that you can assist them by becoming a CASA volunteer.

Enclosed you will find the CASA application packet along with necessary release forms. We will begin to process your application as soon we receive these forms, should you decide to volunteer for CASA.

In order to protect children and provide the court with qualified volunteers, a fingerprint based national criminal history record investigation will be conducted on every applicant. The Office of Judicial Administration will submit your fingerprints and receive the report on your criminal history investigation. Applicants determined ineligible to serve as volunteers based on their criminal history background investigation will have the opportunity to verify their identity with the Kansas Bureau of Investigation. Applicants who do not provide fingerprints for CHRI will not be approved to serve as CASA or CRB volunteers.

The next step will be for us to meet. I am looking forward to hearing from you! Please also feel free to call our office if you have any questions or concerns that you would like to discuss about our program or the application process. On behalf of the children we serve, thank you again for your interest in becoming a CASA volunteer.

Sincerely,

Corina Sanchez
Advocate Coordinator

Frequently Asked Questions about CASA

What is a CASA volunteer advocate?

A Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) is a trained citizen who is appointed by a judge to represent the best interests of a child in court.

All of the children served by CASA are victims of abuse and neglect.

What is the role of a CASA?

A CASA provides a judge with carefully researched background details about the child to help the court make a sound decision about that child's future.

Each case is as unique as the child involved. The advocate evaluates the child's situation to recommend whatever is in the child's best interest. The advocate follows through on the case until it is permanently resolved.

How do CASAs investigate a case?

The CASA talks with the child, parents, family members, social workers, school officials, health providers and others who are knowledgeable about the child's history. The CASA also reviews all records pertaining to the child—school, medical, case worker reports and other documents.

How are CASAs different from social service caseworkers?

Social workers generally are employed by state governments sometimes working on as many as 60 to 90 cases at a time; they are frequently unable to conduct a comprehensive investigation of each case. The CASA has more time and a smaller caseload to work (CASAs typically are only assigned to 1 case at a time.) The CASA does not replace a social worker on a case; they are an independent appointee of the court. The CASA thoroughly examines a child's case, knows about various community resources and makes recommendations to the court independent of state agency restrictions.

How is the CASA different from the child's attorney?

The CASA does not provide legal representation in the courtroom—that is the role of the attorney. However, the CASA does provide crucial background information that assists attorneys in presenting their cases. It is important to remember that CASAs do not represent a child's wishes in court. Rather, they speak through their court report for the child's best interests.

Is there a "typical" CASA?

Our advocates come from all walks of life and possess a variety of professional, educational and ethnic backgrounds. There are no special educational requirements or prior knowledge of social welfare issues required to become a CASA. Many CASAs are full-time employed, others are retired, some are students, and both men and women are CASAs. CASAs must be at least 21 years old, and CASA is pleased to host advocates from age 21 up.

How do CASAs help children?

CASAs offer children trust and advocacy during complex legal proceedings. They help explain to the child the events happening involving the case, reasons they are in court and the roles of the judge, lawyers and case workers. While remaining objective observers, CASAs also encourage the child to express his or her own opinion and hopes about the case. Comparatively, in like cases, children who have had a CASA representing their best interests tend to see less time in foster care. The children are provided with more tailored services to meet their unique needs, and are provided with a consistent adult with whom they can develop a trusting relationship. Because CASAs are trained to advocate for the child's needs, the CASA continually assesses the child's situation, and identifies appropriate resources to benefit the child. Children who have a CASA are also more likely to find a permanent home.

Do lawyers, judges and social caseworkers support CASA?

Yes. Juvenile and family court judges implement the CASA program in their courtrooms and appoint volunteers. CASA has been endorsed by the American Bar Association, the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, and the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention of the U.S. Department of Justice. The federal government also supports CASA, making CASA a priority project of the Department of Justice's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention.

How much time is required to volunteer?

Each case is different. A CASA volunteer usually spends about 10 hours doing research and conducting interviews prior to the first court appearance. More complicated cases can take longer. Once initiated into the system, volunteers work about 10 hours a month.

The volunteer continues until the case is permanently resolved. One of the primary benefits of the CASA program is that, unlike other court principals who often rotate cases, the CASA volunteer is a consistent figure in the proceedings and provides continuity for a child. CASA requires a 2 year commitment.

Are there other agencies or groups providing a similar service?

No. There are other child advocacy organizations, but CASA is the only program where volunteers are appointed by the court to represent a child's best interests.

How many children are in need of a CASA in Kansas?

At any given time, half a million children are in foster care nationwide. About 50,000 children in Kansas have been removed from their homes and could benefit from a CASA's advocacy.

Notice of Screening Procedures

In order to protect children and provide the court with qualified volunteers, a fingerprint-based national criminal history record investigation will be conducted on every applicant, as well as screening through the Department of Children and Families (DCF) Child Abuse and Neglect Central Registry.

The Office of Judicial Administration will submit the applicant's fingerprints to Kansas Bureau of Investigation (KBI) for a Criminal History Record Inquiry. The KBI will provide a report on the applicant's criminal record investigation to the Office of Judicial Administration. Applicants found to have been convicted of, or charges pending for, a felony or misdemeanor involving sex offense, child abuse or neglect, or related acts that would pose risks to children or the CASA program's credibility will not be approved for service. Applicants who do not provide fingerprints for criminal history background checks will not be approved to serve as a CASA.

The applicant's local CASA program will make inquiries to the DCF Child Abuse and Neglect Central Registry and registries of other states where the applicant has lived in the past five years. If it is found that DCF or a similar agency in another state lists the applicant as the perpetrator of an act of child abuse or neglect the CASA program will generally disallow certification.

All information will be held in strict confidence. Criteria used in the selection of a volunteer will be such as to ensure that the individual is able to meet the responsibilities of a CASA. NO INDIVIDUAL WILL BE REJECTED BECAUSE OF RACE, COLOR, RELIGIOUS CREED, NATIONAL ORIGIN, ANCESTRY, GENDER, AGE, DISABILITY OR MARITAL STATUS.

I have read and agree to the above and certify that the information contained in the CASA Volunteer Application is correct and accurate to the best of my knowledge.
